Mr. King,

I do not support the draining of aquifers in the Great Basin to support the bloated water habit of Las Vegas. It's a city in a DESERT! People should appreciate the fact that water is a scarce, precious resource and live accordingly. Too many swimming pools, fountains, golf courses and green lawns that should be xeriscaped are witness to the fact that Las Vegas is water greedy.

Until the people of Las Vegas can show some responsibility for the way they live, I don't believe they should be rewarded by stealing the water of ranchers, farmers and Native Americans in the Great Basin.

Sincerely,

Beverly Hawkins
